The IBSA dataset contains information about persons born in Ireland who immigrated to South Australia in the 1800's. It also includes the first generation born in SA and their children where available. These persons were identified by their descendants and other interested people, so the coverage is patchy.

The Irish Born South Australians project was initiated by Pat Roberts in 2005. Others working on the original project included Georgina Bliss, Robert Beckwith, Kevin Bowden, Judy Hasleton, Jan Clayden and Jo Booth. The second phase starting in 2014 was led by Paul Foord with assistance from Jo Booth, Ron Carey and Franc Houben.

The effort in checking and correlating these records has been limited, and mainly aimed at reducing the large number of potential duplicates which were in the initial dataset. Consequently the information is presented 'as is' and users are warned that they should seek further information from other sources to support the data found here.

Genealogy SA is currently working to extend this list, but at no stage will comprehensive checking be done to ensure that the records are 'correct'.
